Syracuse's Original Candy Girl. Mary Elizabeth Evans of Syracuse needed money, and she went to work in a clever way to make it. She prepared the way for a large candy trade by having a booklet printed which con sisted of brief letters from Syracuse physicians who bought candies from her, telling in a few words what they thought of them. One of this bright girl's plans was

'Mary Elizabeth's" homemade candy, while at one end of the case is a glass and wood cabinet with double doors. Swinging from one of the doors is a sign printed in red and black, which reads as follows:
"Open these doors. Take what you wish. Leave cost of goods taken. Make the establishment of a showcase at which all customers help themselves.

In the case are neatly piled boxes of your change from my till. Trusting to customers' honor. Please close the doors. Mary Elizabeth Evans." In this cabinet there is an assortment of candy neatly done up in box-es, each bearing a medallion of the maker and the words "Mary Elizahandwriting. On the lower shelf of the cabinet is the till, with places for the various denominations of change and a long space for bills. The customer is expected to open the doors. make his choice, place the money in

The Use of Mirrors. A full length mirror is as necessary to a woman as her comb and brush Have you ever felt the shock of being brought suddenly face to face with a mirror which cruelly showed up every mperfection of your makeup? Did you forget how your dress skirt bobbed up in front or hung in unsightly scallops? Did you relish the misfit of any one o your garments or the ugliness of you feet? Those things never could have happened to the woman who made a full length mirror her best friend. There are women who have no use for a hand glass. They can be picked out by their unbecoming hats, badly dressed hair, careless neckwear and crooked dress seams. If the hand glass told them that the middle of a dress skirt was an inch or two beyond the immediate back of the waist, readjust ment would follow. If the hand glass showed one side or the back of a hat to be hideous, the pretty front would be forgotten, and the hat would re-main in the possession of the milliner. Women calmly walk down the street it shoes which present a brave front, but are run over at the heel and ugly enough. Would that happen where a long mirror and a hand glass were in daily use? We are none of us above the possession of a certain amount of pride and vanity which can give us some very uncomfortable hours when they are hurt.-Boston Traveler

How About One Dollar Corn?

Will corn bring $1 a bushel by the Fourth of July, as predicted by many? I think not, from the fact that many will not fatten hogs to sell at the preent price of corn. Corn is worth 70 cents per bushel, but few farmers will sell at that price. They would rather hoard their corn and sell their hogs as soon as marketable, for no farmer will pay 70 cents a bushel and feed it to his hogs, and what he does buy will be fed to cattle, and the hogs will follow them. We all know that dollar corn cannot be fed to cattle. Many are feeding cottonseed and oil meal to their cattle, which they claim is cheaper than corn at its present price. Others will rough their stock through the winter and save their corn, expecting it to bring a big price next summer. In central Iowa there was some old corn left over, and the new crop averaged thirty-
